Who says high school grads can't be pilots? Not the Army.

You have your diploma and the desire to fly. You're in top condition. That's all you need to start on the road to being an Army Pilot.

To get your wings you must complete the Army Flight Training Program. First, rigid entrance tests. Basic training, preflight, then 8 months of flight training.

Graduate and you'll be a U.S. Army Warrant Officer. Entitled to extra flight pay and the privileges of a commissioned officer.

You'll fly helicopters, maybe fixed-wing aircraft—anywhere in the Free World your country needs you.

Another exciting possibility: Crew Chief or Mechanic training. Same great chance to serve and travel.

See your nearest Army Recruiting Sergeant for full details. Or mail the coupon below. It's the first step in earning your Army Pilot wings.

as we see it

■ For years the National Collegiate Athletic Association has been playing the television networks, sponsors and audience for a bunch of boobs. That's an awful lot of boobs to be hoodwinked by a few college slickers.

NCAA football will cost ABC $7.8 million a year for the next two years. ABC may then offer for sale to sponsors 36 college football games on 14 Saturday dates and Thanksgiving. Eight dates will be given over to national telecasts, and seven dates to four games telecast to different regions of the country.

■ If NCAA runs true to form, about a quarter of the 36 games will be what football fans want to see. The others will be forced on the network, and sponsors, and viewers by NCAA's ridiculous rules.

The rules? No team may appear on television more than three times in two years—and only two of those times may be national telecasts. Each of NCAA's eight districts must be represented on television each year by three different schools. Forty-seven schools must appear on the schedule each year. Four schools not previously seen on TV and four not seen on TV for the past five years must appear each season.

■ Result? This year California-Notre Dame and Georgia-Alabama were only regional games on a day when the rest of the country had to see things like Utah-Arizona and Indiana-Kansas State. Notre Dame-Purdue, Nebraska-Missouri, Michigan State-Notre Dame and Princeton-Dartmouth weren't offered to viewers.

There must be some better way to set up a college football television schedule. It will come only if the networks stop paying through the nose to satisfy the whims of the NCAA instead of the desires of viewers.

A two-part television program will encompass his amazing career

The real David was filmed in the Accademia delle Belle Arti in Florence.

"I think both the book and the movie, 'The Agony and the Ecstasy,' were travesties," says Tom Priestley, NBC's award-winning ("The Louvre") director and cameraman. How would he do the story of Michelangelo? That question will be answered this Wednesday (Dec. 22) and Feb. 23, when the two-part color documentary "Michelangelo: The Last Giant" will be telecast. Priestley filmed the show, following a script written by another award winner, Lou Hazam ("Vincent Van Gogh: A Self-Portrait," "Shakespeare: Soul of an Age"), who produced the program as well. They will show Michelangelo through his letters and poetry, scenes of places where he lived and worked, and, of course, his masterpieces.

Or, how 'O.K. Crackerby!' was born

(The confessions of a man who fathered a fiasco)

BY CLEVELAND AMORY

(Who also is TV Guide's critic)

Once upon a time, when I was a small boy—about two years ago—I created an idea for television. It was an idea which grew out of a casual conversation and exchange of ideas with Mr. Douglas Cramer, the director of program development for

ABC. My idea was to have a show called Saturday Review, a real magazine of the air, one that would handle the arts—books, theater, movies, even TV itself. Mr. Cramer's idea, on the other hand, was a show based on my writings in the field of Society.

So we compromised. We came up with an idea based on my writings in the field of Society.

It was very exciting as the idea took shape. Once upon a time, I wrote —such as the TV season of 1965-1966—there was a lovable old millionaire from Oklahoma named O.K. Crackerby, a man with a fortune in, in more ways than one, natural gas. He is a widower with three children (an older girl and two younger boys), a man who has come East to ply the Eastern resort circuit, since he promised his “missus,” before she passed on, that some day he would stop just making money and do right by the kids. To do this, to make little gentlemen out of the little monsters, and out of the girl a “debbytant,” he has acquired the services of something he has learned the Eastern resort families have—a “tutor companion.” The latter would be the star—the man whose job it would be to teach the kids there is something more in the world than making money. He would teach them manners, how to play sports and, perhaps most important, how to be a good sport. Above all, the show would not only have the conflict between nouveau riche and ancien régime—it would also have, as a dividend, an ever-changing lush background of this country’s great resorts.

Mr. Cramer leaped at it all, especially at the tutor companion idea—and particularly the name I had for the young man, St. John Quincy, pronounced “Sinjin Quinzy.” In fact, everyone was so taken with the idea of a brand-new character in a job nobody had ever heard of that they decided to call it My Man St. John.

Soon the treatment was completed and the show went onward and upward, to the final board meeting where the summit decisions are made. They’re thrilling, these final meetings. In a big room, around a huge table, sit all the top network brass—Mr. Leonard Goldenson, the president in charge of all the other presidents; Mr. Thomas Moore, the president in charge of all the vice presidents; and the vice presidents themselves, men in charge of so many things it gives you a charge just thinking about them. Into this room, one by one, come the little people—the people with the new-show ideas. Each is given just 10 minutes to present his case for his show. My presentation—I ask my readers, could it have been otherwise?—was masterful. I grabbed them with my opening teaser, held on for dear life through my characters and projected storylines, and closed with a stirring epilog that literally throttled them. And when it was over, I already knew the verdict. A pilot would be made—and with their money, too. Mr. Leonard Goldenson himself even spoke to me directly. “Mr. Amory,” he asked, “are you going to write this show for us?”

Here, if you can believe it, I made a mistake. I said no. I said I didn’t believe any one person could write the show every week. I said I thought it would have to be me and another guy.

The simplicity of it was devastating. All of those executives became, in one moment, in the face of such childlike honesty, children themselves. And, for the first time in network-summit-meeting annals, I believe, they all smiled.

Let us do the worrying, they promised me. They would get the other guy. Today, being an older and wiser man, I realize that what I should have said was, yes, I would write the show. If I had said that, those executives would promptly have crowded 5000 or so dollars into my pockets every week under the “writing budget,” and I then, like any other good writer-in-chief, could have gone out and hired somebody at, say, $1.25 an hour, given him a couple of hours each week to do a script and taken home each week, by my figuring, $4997.50. continued

'I made plans to go abroad, to buy myself a TV station, to get a new suit—all the things I'd always wanted.'

Ah, the pity of it.

But, no matter. After the meeting I went outside the room and held a celebration—not only with Mr. Cramer but with Mr. Cramer's then assistant, Mr. Leonard Goldberg. We drank a toast to the success of My Man St. John; and I, of course, made plans—to go abroad, to buy myself a TV station, to get a new suit—all the things I'd always wanted. Then, very quietly, Mr. Goldberg spoke. "Cleve," he said, "I'm just a poor boy from Brooklyn. But just between friends, what the heck is a two-door companion?"

That's the way he said it—two-door companion, and I honestly think he thought it was some kind of an automobile. Yet it wasn't that easy. Here was a mere slip of a lad, but a network executive nonetheless, who had fought the good fight for the show—never failing, never flagging—with-out even knowing. Surely he was entitled to a good answer.

I gave him one.

"Oh," he said. And there, I suppose, with my answer, went all hopes for an ABC answer to NBC's My Mother, the Car.

In any case, the search for the "other guy" was not a long one. For, only a few days later, Mr. Douglas Cramer called me again. "What," he asked, "would you think of the idea of Abe Burrows?"

Mr. Burrows! I exclaimed. Mr. Burrows! The play doctor of Broadway! I said I thought it was a wonderful idea. "Oh, and Cleve," Mr. Cramer added, "I want to warn you about something. If Mr. Burrows does decide to do it, it won't be quite all your show any more."

By now I had picked up the lingo. "Let me do the worrying, Doug boy," I told him. "You get Abe."

Abe Burrows as my other guy! I revised my plans. Never mind the trip abroad; I'd go around the world. Never mind the TV station; I'd buy the Yankees back from CBS. And the suit—well, I'd get the suit. I really needed it.

Mr. Burrows promptly wrote the pilot script, using, I was glad to see, the exact words I had used in my treatment's description of St. John—i.e., "He is not Hollywood's idea of a gentleman, he is a gentleman. He is a man who is very good at weekends but not very good in the middle of the week. He is an amateur in a world gone pro." I was thrilled.

He then called. "Cleve," he said, "what do you think of the idea of Burl Ives to play Crackerby?"

Mr. Ives! I exclaimed. Big Daddy himself! I said I thought it was a wonderful idea. Once more I could hardly believe my ears. "But Cleve," Mr. Burrows continued, "I want to warn you about something. I don't know whether we can get Ives, but even if we can, it's going to mean giving up something. You see . . ."

I cut him short. "Let me do the worrying, Abe boy," I said. "You get Burl."

To get Mr. Ives, however, it seemed we had to give up quite a little—including, as it turned out, the show. For United Artists Television, who had Ives for a pilot about sailing in the Caribbean, asked, in return for giving up Ives and their show, our show. Also, Mr. Ives was not happy with the title of the show. If we didn't get a star to play St. John, he demanded that the title of the show be his. If, on the other hand, we got a star, then he asked a "neutral" title. No more My Man St. John. Since Hal Buckley, an off-Broadway actor who is a potential star but was no star then, was shortly signed for the part, the title became O.K. Crackerby!

Next came the fateful days when the pilot was actually being shot. I could hardly wait to get out to Hollywood to see it. I rushed to the Sam Goldwyn Studios. The guard asked for my name. I gave it to him. He looked down a long list. "You're not on it," he said.

I smiled democratically. "I know you have to be careful," I said. "I'm probably unlisted." "Oh yeah," he said. "You wait here."

Finally, when I got in, I learned the guard wasn't the only one who didn't know I had anything to do with the show. Neither did anyone else.

Eventually, I did get to meet somebody who introduced me to the executive producer, a man named Rod Amateau. "He's a friend of Abe's," I was told. "You see, Abe won't be actually living with the show."

Mr. Amateau, it turned out, was evidently pretty busy, too. O.K. Crackerby! was just one of six shows he was involved with, including, I was sorry to learn, My Mother, the Car. However, he told me he had been brought up in Spanish Harlem and had strong feelings on the subject of Society. A little nervously I asked him if any of the show was going to be shot in Palm Beach. "No," he said busily, "we'll fill in all that stuff later with wild shots."

Oh, I said. Nonetheless, when the pilot was completed, everybody was thrilled. When it was tested by an audience-rating system, it tested the highest of all the year's new shows. No fewer than 37 sponsors were lined up to sponsor it and, of the very first four to see it, three bought it. Before the show even went on the air, it had, it was said, been responsible for bringing more than $10,000,000 in new business to the network.

The No. 1 new show of the new season! I was certain to be rich. Now even the trip around the world wasn't enough. Not even the Yankees appealed. I'd buy TV GUIDE. And hang the expense—I'd get two suits.

I went to see the pilot in high spirits. In modest expectation, I awaited my credit on the screen—that glorious line: "Created by Cleveland Amory." And there it was: "Created by Abe Burrows and Cleveland Amory." Oh, well, I thought, Burrows did lend a hand, and, anyway, continued

'The guard asked for my name.'

there would be other credits. And sure enough there were—many of them in fact: "Written by Abe Burrows," "Story Consultant, Abe Burrows," "Directed by Rod Amateau and Abe Burrows," even "Theme by Robert Emmett Dolan and Abe Burrows."

Oh well, I thought, that's show business. And anyway, maybe now I was going to be so rich it would be imperative for me to remain anonymous.

Back in New York the new scripts

'Evidently Mr. Burrows had gotten himself still another guy—and, in fact, another and another and another, as far as the eye could see.'

began to roll in. By all sorts of writers. Evidently, Mr. Burrows had gotten himself still another guy—and, in fact, another and another and another, as far as the eye could see. The only trouble was that, as these scripts rolled in, the one thing the eye could see was that any resemblance between them and the original idea of the show was purely coincidental.

The writers worked, it seemed, not from my treatment at all, but from a curious "Prospectus" which was, according to its credits, "Prepared by Mr. Burrows for the Use of All Departments." In this Mr. Crackerby was described as a man who "would like to be accepted as the equal of the Vanderbilts, Whitneys, and Rockefellers." As for St. John Quincy, he was described as "the author's agent."

From this time on, Crackerby became as broad as Broadway, and St. John became—well, frankly, he'd had it. Nobody likes agents. If the writers wanted anything at all about "Society"—which was rare—then they had a scene shot in an expensive restaurant and had something served flambé. But the whole idea of Crackerby served up to the public as the outsider in an "in" environment was, to the writer who never gets out of Hollywood, obviously out.

Equally obviously, this sort of thing called for stern measures from the Old Man. I went out to Hollywood again. This time the executive producer was too busy to see me. But the producer, a man named Chuck Stewart, who was formerly the producer of The Joey Bishop Show, graciously granted me an interview. He told me he wasn't at all worried. "Actually, Cleve," he confided, "the public tells us which direction to go on these things. All of these shows have growing pains."

At the sign of the next growing pain, however, which occurred a week later, I decided to go direct to Mr. Norman Glenn, executive vice president in charge of television production for United Artists. By the time I got to see Mr. Glenn, he had replaced Mr. Stewart with a new producer, and I've heard they may even replace the new producer with a new new producer. But I found Mr. Glenn the soul of confidence. "We've got a brand-new show now, Cleve boy," he said. "From now on the bullet has left the gun. It either hits the target or it doesn't."

While I was waiting for the shot, however, I decided to play a long shot and see the president of United Artists TV himself, Mr. John Sinn. At the door his receptionist asked my name. I told her, "From what company?" she asked me. "Unfortunately, young lady," I told her sternly, "yours." Mr. Sinn himself sat at a long table, drumming his fingers and glancing at his watch. "What," he asked, "can I do for you?" "Mr. Sinn," I told him slowly, "I understand you have five shows on the air. I would like to know if you ever invite some people to your house for dinner and, after dinner, suggest—with enthusiasm—that they watch one of your shows?"

Mr. Sinn seemed very surprised. I told him that once in a while I had some people to my house for dinner and after dinner I often suggested—with enthusiasm—that they not watch O.K. Crackerby!

Actually, as I tried to tell Mr. Sinn, the very second script had every possible fault a script could have. It had a bad idea to begin with—an idea for Crackerby to give a party for a visiting English viscount so that he could "bust into Society"—a teaser which had nothing to do with the rest of the show, a climax which consisted of a curious wrestling match between Crackerby and the viscount and, literally, no end at all.

In any case, after this show had actually hit the air, I sat down and wrote a "Prepared for the Use of All Departments" of my very own. I asked first if it would be possible, on future shows, to have the teaser of the show in some way remotely connected with the body of the show. I said that I realized in the case of this particular episode that this was impossible since there was no body of the show, but perhaps, I hoped, it would be possible later on.

Then, I asked if it would be feasible, since it was, after all, a show about resorts, to show once in a while a tiny little glimpse of the ocean or perhaps, as a special treat for the audience, a teentsy little inexpensive bit of beach. Perhaps even, I suggested, if it wasn't asking too much, the next time the ABC airplane went to Palm Beach to take one of their wild shots, they could also take along with them one of the tamer Hollywood writers. I thought that if one of these writers saw Palm Beach—well, I even admitted it, it was probably just a wild dream.

The big difference

Finally I described, in simple, short sentences, the differences between my idea and their show. My idea made St. John the star of the show, the motive force of the central idea, which was to make the Crackerby kids presentable; their show made Crackerby the star and had no central idea. My idea was not to have Crackerby want to "bust into society"—he couldn't care less about it for himself and wants it only for his kids. My idea made him and his family the outsiders against the almighty forces of the "ins." Their show made Crackerby the almighty force himself and, because they did not understand anything about the "in" forces, he had no adversary at all. My idea was a satire of the whole social background of Palm Beach, Newport and other points social; their show was not a satire at all and had, on top of this failing, literally no background—it was entirely shot, as far as I could see, in a Hollywood-hotel living room.

All of this, I realized, was very difficult to grasp, and I suggested that if there was anyone in the entire United Artists organization capable of so doing, perhaps somebody could read this letter aloud, slowly, to him.

To this day I believe that if I had only known which of the United Artists to mail my letter to, our country—I mean O.K. Crackerby!—would not be in the position it is today. Enough people heard about it, however, so it immediately brought results. The very next script I received had literally nothing to do with anything. Literally—not with Society, not with resorts, not with Palm Beach, not even with the Crackerbys. It was evidently one of those scripts which Hollywood writers keep in their drawers to sell, with appropriate name changes, to any show. It told the story of a poor boy, the son of a man who owned a bait shop, who didn't seem to have any mother and who had therefore made up an animal, a griffin, to be his constant companion. The story also went, at some length, into the story of the boy's schoolteacher and her relationship with his father and was, of course, full of all the psychological implications the Hollywood writers know and love so well.

Out to Hollywood again

Once more I went to Hollywood, for the advance screening of this episode—a highly exclusive meeting of just the top 22 men now connected with the O.K. Crackerby! series. Every man Jack of them was there: Mr. Edgar Scherick, vice president in charge of ABC Television programming; the executive-washroom-key men of United Artists; the Beresford Production boys (Mr. Burrows' company); the Wayfarer Enterprises Inc.-ers, (Mr. Ives' company); the top brass of Cottage Industries (Mr. Amateau's company) and of the studios where the show was being shot; even men from the William Morris Agency, men who apparently represented everyone connected with the show in any way except the wardrobe mistress and me.

After the screening was over, everyone, of course, wanted to know what to think. But it was a very difficult decision because the head man, Mr. Scherick, hadn't yet said anything. In fact he was talking, for some time afterward, with the man beside him. Finally, though, he stood up. "I didn't like this as an outline," he said. "I didn't like it as a treatment. I didn't like it as a script. And I don't like it as a show. Is that clear?"

It was. Immediately everybody agreed. It was not only bad, they said, it was awful, a crime against not only the industry but humanity.

When it came my turn, I didn't say anything. Everyone was amazed. Heads turned. Eyes popped. Some, former friends, drew away as if I had the plague. Others, mere acquaintances, almost despite themselves, reached out to me—to save me. Finally Mr. Scherick asked me very quietly why I wasn't saying anything.

And then I told him. I told him, and them, that I liked it. I liked it because it had absolutely nothing to do with my original idea. And it had, therefore, given me a brand-new idea for a brand-new series for next year.

Immediately everyone became fascinated. You could have heard a pin drop. I waited until there wasn't a sound. And then, gently, I began.

Once upon a time, I said—such as the TV season of 1966-67—there was a lovable old millionaire from Oklahoma named O.K. Crackerby, a man with a fortune in, in more ways than one, natural gas. He is a widower, one with three children, an older girl and two younger boys, a man who has come East to ply the Eastern resort circuit, since he promised his "missus," before she passed on, that someday he would stop just making money and do right by the kids. To do this, he has acquired the services of something he has learned the Eastern resort families have—a "tutor companion" . . .

And you know what? They loved it.

A few days after this article was written, ABC canceled O.K. Crackerby! It goes off the air Jan. 6.—Ed.

For the first time, viewers will be privileged to see live coverage of a spacecraft splashdown this week. If all goes well, Gemini VI is scheduled to hit the water on Dec. 14 or 15; Gemini VII on Saturday, Dec. 18. Live cameras aboard the carrier Wasp are to pick up the action for transmittal to the Early Bird satellite and then to the networks and viewers.

Meantime, all three networks provided ample night and day coverage with spot announcements, bulletins and specials following the blast-off of the G-VII—an activity, incidentally, that was marked by unusual split coverage shared with the Penn State-Maryland football game on NBC screens. Intermittently, Cape Kennedy and the game shared the screen, with sportscaster Lindsey Nelson and spacecaster Merrill Mueller, both in the announcers' booth, fighting for attention. David Brinkley said: "This will be the first time a rocket takes off on the 50-yard line or that football is played on Pad 19," and he wasn't far from being right.

Shake-up: In the second major shake-up of top network executives in the past year, NBC president Robert E. Kintner last week was going through the motions of resigning. He was saying good-bye to friends in the network, and his lawyers were working out a financial settlement. Upon Kintner's formal resignation, Walter D. Scott, NBC-TV president, was to be elevated to NBC chairman, and Julian Goodman, executive vice president of NBC News, was to move up to the NBC presidency.

Only nine months ago, James Aubrey resigned as president of CBS-TV and was succeeded by John A. Schneider. Aubrey's resignation followed a dip in CBS fortunes, but Kintner's was a puzzle. NBC has had a successful season and the network's financial position has never been better.

Kintner, 56, was a prominent Washington correspondent before going with the ABC network in the mid-Forties. He became president in 1949, then joined NBC in 1957. He was named president of that network in 1958.

Colossus: In other high corporate news, ABC and the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. announced that they proposed to merge, subject to formal approval by their boards, shareholders and appropriate Government agencies. These included the Federal Communications Commission, the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Antitrust Division of the Justice Department.

If the merger goes through, it would create the largest communications-electronics-entertainment colossus in the United States. ITT is a major supplier of electronics and communications services; ABC is the Nation's third largest broadcasting network.

The merger would leave CBS as the only network standing alone in the big three. NBC is owned by Radio Corporation of America.

TOYNBEE PRO AND CON

Arnold J. Toynbee's article "Television: The Lion that Squeaks" [TV GUIDE, Dec. 4] is, in my opinion, in the worst tradition of the writings of all the sanctimonious do-gooders with badly overdeveloped social consciences who have made the word "intellectual" synonymous with "snob" in the minds of many.

Arthel Cake
Fresno, Cal.

Commercial television has much that is educational and interesting at the same time, Mr. Toynbee. Examples: CBS Reports "The National Citizenship Test," NBC White Paper, and David Brinkley's "Congress Needs Help."

David E. Litke
Springfield, Mass.

So another egghead is telling us what we must have on television. Mr. Toynbee, we like our TV just the way it is.

Kay Hollister
Newbury, Ohio

Toynbee was worth the price of admission to your magazine. More of the same, please, by him and others of his intellectual level.

Gemini VII Recovery

If the Gemini VII flight has gone according to plan, astronauts Frank Borman and James Lovell will splash down in the Western Atlantic recovery area at approximately 5:30 A.M., bringing to an end the longest manned space mission in history. CBS and NBC plan to go on the air at 4 A.M.; ABC at approximately 4:30. Live coverage will originate in color from sites on the mainland, and all networks plan live, black-and-white coverage from the aircraft carrier USS Wasp. The anchor men . . . ABC: Jules Bergman. CBS: Walter Cronkite and Mike Wallace. NBC: Chet Huntley, David Brinkley and Frank McGee.

2 PRO BASKETBALL—Warriors*Guy Rodgers, the Warriors top scorer.

The San Francisco Warriors meet the Philadelphia 76ers tonight at 8:30 P.M. and the Los Angeles Lakers tomorrow at 9 P.M. Both are live telecasts.

Alex Hannum's Warriors have been hovering around the .500 mark but still have stayed close to the first-place Lakers. Both teams have been playing without a starter—Paul Neumann of the Warriors and Elgin Baylor of the Lakers.

Neumann should be back in action tonight but Baylor's knee might limit his playing time.

The 76ers, who are coached by Dolph Schayes, have stayed even with the Cincinnati Royals and the Boston Celtics in the Eastern Division mainly through the efforts of Wilt Chamberlain, Hal Greer, Bill Cunningham and Lucious Jackson.

Coached by Fred Schaus, the Lakers have been losing games without superstar Baylor and despite the league-leading scoring of Jerry West.

WARRIORS: 5 Rodgers, 7 Phillips, 12 Neumann, 14 Meschery, 16 Attles, 18 Erickson, 24 Barry, 32 McLemore, 34 Olsen, 42 Thurmond, 44 Hetzel.

'VIETNAM: DECEMBER, 1965'

SPECIAL COLOR The growing U.S. involvement in Vietnam is the subject of this report, produced by Chet Hagan.

In Vietnam, U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and Gen. William Westmoreland are interviewed, and cameras view Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara touring military areas. Ron Nessen reports on the effectiveness of South Vietnamese troops, and Sander Vanocur and Dean Breolis are seen in films of the battle at Plei Me. Garrick Utley discusses the stability of the Saigon government.

The protest movement in the U.S. is examined through interviews with Joseph Crown, secretary of the Lawyers' Committee on American Policy Toward Vietnam, and with supporters of the Administration's policy. The reporters are Chet Huntley and Frank McGee.

Paratroopers of the 173rd Airborne Brigade prepare for search-and-destroy operation.

Elie Abel discusses the chances for a negotiated settlement and our allies' attitudes toward the war; President Johnson's recent statements on Vietnam, and other late-breaking events are evaluated; and David Brinkley considers possible future developments, including the chance of conflict with China. 10:00 5 10 WORLD TOWN MEETING

SPECIAL The universities of Harvard and Oxford are linked via the Early Bird satellite for a transoceanic debate, taped earlier today. The teams debate U.S. policy in Vietnam.

In New York, the three-man Harvard team is headed by professor of government Henry A. Kissinger, and law students Lawrence H. Tribe and Robert M. Shrum, who take the affirmative position in defending U.S. involvement.

The negative position is taken by the Oxford team: Michael Foot, Socialist

Member of Parliament, Stephen Marks and Pakistani Tariq Ali, former president of the Oxford Union (the university's famed debating society).

After the five-minute opening addresses by Prof. Kissinger and MP Foot, the teams cross-question each other. Student groups on both sides of the Atlantic also take part in the cross-questioning.

Charles Collingwood is the moderator. Producers are Vern Diamond and William K. McClure. Don Hewitt is the executive producer. (60 min.)

9:00 3 4 8 MICHELANGELO—Documentary

"... to break the marble spell is all the hand that serves the brain can do."

—Michelangelo

SPECIAL COLOR This study of Michelangelo weaves together a narrative drawn from the artist's writings, and views of his sculpture, painting and architecture.

Tonight's hour (the first of a two-part chronicle) traces Michelangelo's early years—his childhood in the country and town of Florence; his work as a teenage apprentice in the schools of the painter Ghirlandaio and the sculptor Bertoldo; and his experiences as a protégé of the Florentine leader Lorenzo de' Medici. In 1505, the 30-year-old Michelangelo was summoned to Rome by the powerful Pope Julius II, who wanted the sculptor to create his tomb, and paint on the high, vaulted ceiling of the Vatican's Sistine Chapel the story of the Creation and the prophecy of Christ's coming.

'THE LAST GIANT'

Peter Ustinov, as the voice of Michelangelo, and narrator José Ferrer describe these early years, when Michelangelo accomplished more than many artists do in a lifetime, including his Pietà and the gigantic David.

PLEA

Remember last year when NBC was going to drop The Man from U.N.C.L.E.? Now it is one of the most popular shows. NBC pulled the biggest blooper of the year by canceling The Rogues. Now it wants to cancel Convoy. Give it a chance, NBC.

WILD, MAN, WILD

Elisabeth Lewis did a fine job on Robert Conrad in "The Kid with the Golden Sandbox" [TV GUIDE, Dec. 4]. It's refreshing to see a writer sit back and let a colossal egoist expose himself. They should call the show The Wild, Wild Conrad.

Answer to last week's puzzle

By the time 'Gomer' gets his chance at a tractor, the field has become a lake.

BACK TO THE FARM

Gomer Pyle
comes to Plowville, and so does
the rain

BY P. M. CLEPPER

In the gray wet of a fall afternoon, on a Minnesota farm bottom, a portable stage stands surrounded by vast swamps of brown water and the kind of greasy black mud that grabs and holds a person's shoes.

It is a natural amphitheater, but there's no audience up the hillside—only a new river rushing straight down toward the stage. To divert it, trucks have dumped sand and pink corncobs.

In front of the stage, in the rain, huddle 800 people, some mired ankle-deep. They stand watching a Hollywood performer presenting a free half-hour show.

personalities are doing in that première week of the season—hitting the hinterlands to plug their shows. (Even Ladadog of Please Don't Eat the Daisies was sent on such an errand.)

The event is the National Plow Matches, a sort of World Series of farming, set up each year in a different Midwest rural area which is temporarily renamed Plowville, U.S.A. This year the host is a Minnesota community: Waseca (pop. 6500). *

In election years, politicians fly to the honey of 100,000 farmer-voters out there in the stubble. Candidates Eisenhower and Kennedy were lured in their time, but in this electionless year, politicians have stayed away in throngs. Among the invited no-shows: President Johnson, Richard Nixon and Bobby Kennedy. Also the King of Norway—who is also not up for election.

With only second-string statesmen available, Plowville officials had come up with the notion of getting a showbiz draw. In Waseca is a Birds Eye frozen-food plant run by General

Foods, sponsors of six nighttime shows on CBS. The plant manager had been asked if Plowville could get Gomer Pyle—and up went the request, through webs of red tape. Down came the answer: "Impossible."

However, General Foods might try to talk Eddie Albert into coming. (His Green Acres was new, appropriate and needed publicity.) No thanks, said Plowville, and cagily began wondering how Clairol's Inger Stevens—who portrays a Minnesota Farmer's Daughter—would like to see the fields of home. General Foods came around and Nabors was set. *

On Sept. 17, Nabors works in Hollywood until he is picked up by his personal manager, Dick Linke. They struggle through the heavy Los Angeles Friday afternoon traffic to the airport. (All stars travel with at least one manager or a publicity man). En route by jet, Nabors and Linke miss viewing the first Gomer Pyle-USMC episode of the season.

It is drizzling when they land at the St. Paul-Minneapolis airport. At a near-by motel Nabors falls asleep to the splatter of rain. Fifty air miles south, it is also pouring, sogging Plowville's months of plans.

Dapper in a gray hop-sack suit with a flowered handkerchief in the pocket—which his Japanese houseboy added while packing—Nabors begins Saturday with coffee with two Marine escorts. (Nabors: "Marines are fond of the show—we don't make fun of them. I'm the only goofy one.") Sgt. Mike Schmidt of the St. Paul recruiting office informs, "They wouldn't let us use Marine vehicles for this tour." Of Gomer, Sgt. George Claus of Minneapolis growls, "His hair's a bit longer'n we'd allow a Marine."

A plump woman approaches. "You're Gomer, aren't you?" He answers, "Yessum." All day, Nabors will not hear himself called anything but Gomer. (Which, incidentally, is a Biblical feminine name. Gomer was a harlot who married the prophet Hosea.)

Nabors goes to a downtown Minneapolis hotel where he holds an incongruous dual press conference with Minnesota Gov. Karl Rolvaag before two television cameras and a tape recorder. Questions alternate between politics and show business. Nabors observes that elections are "kinda like ratings in our business." Rolvaag invades the comedy field by relating that he had been a cavalryman (in tanks) during the war.

Nabors tells of his plowing experience—back in Alabama, with a hand plow behind mules. "Wisht I had a nickel for every furrow I plowed that way," he yearns, Gomer-style.

He plugs his TV special. A Columbia Records man shoves Gomer's LP, "Shazam!," into his hand for photos. Autographing the album, and embarrassed at not knowing how to spell Rolvaag's name, Nabors doesn't ask but writes Rolvaig.

Nabors is supposed to get a key to the state from the governor, but it has been misplaced. No one continued had ever received a key to Minnesota before, so one has had to be created—made by an artist at the local CBS station. When it turns up, hours late, it has a CBS eye painted on it.

An aspiring comedian, Danny Klayman, 19, appears, to meet Nabors and get business advice from Linke.

Nabors and his record album are whizzed to the studios of WCCO. Radio personality Howard Viken says, "I hear you have a nice tenor voice." Nabors is a baritone. A number from "Shazam!" is played. Nabors leaves, shaking hands good-by with the receptionist.

Jim Judge, then a General Foods public relations man, has flown in from White Plains, N.Y., to take part in the Gomer visitation. A cigar-chewing, Walter Matthau-type character, he makes some grumbling remarks about Columbia's getting the publicity while GF is picking up the tab. Pyle-driving Dick Linke is wry about the fact that everybody wants Nabors! "The first time we were here, nobody had time for us. I'm not bitter—I just have the memory of an elephant."

Back at the motel at Noon, Nabors phones his mother in Alabama. She had bought a color set to watch his program, but only got the picture—no sound. She can't buy his record down there either.

Jim Judge reads a newspaper report on Plowville's first disastrous day—Friday: A congressman had an audience of six. Judge mutters, "I hope those six stayed around."

It is raining and fog has settled. The governor's National Guard plane won't try for Plowville. (Rolvaaq never does make it there at all.) Nabors leaves by convertible. En route the downpour approaches a cloudburst—which reduces to a hard, steady rain as the autos arrive at the entrance to Plowville. A highway patrolman orders, "Put down that window." Nabors does, and the officer smiles with embarrassment, "I just had to shake your hand." He does.

Plowville has become Mudville, and there's no joy there. Cars can't get on the fields. All become stuck except vehicles with four-wheel drive, tractors—and horses. Earlier in the day, the plowing contests have taken place; Nabors never sees anyone actually plowing. He is astonished to hear that the plowmen ding-up their plows like teen-agers do hot rods—and that the matches are all for honor, since the top prize is only $150.

Nabors transfers to a Harvester Scout—something like a Jeep. He is bounced through the bog that a few days before has been a solid field of plow-under alfalfa.

He forgoes changing into his Marine summer tans. Instead he borrows a gray-green raincoat, gets out of the Scout into the rain, and, surrounded by drenched fans, is helped into overshoes. Husky farmers offer to carry him to the stage. Nabors declines: "I'd feel silly as heck."

There has been some dispute about just what Nabors will do for his audience. Linke: "Jim is not going to entertain. That's for his night-club act. He's just to appear." Nabors: "Those people are waiting in the rain; I've got to do something for them."

At the mike, Gomer says "Hey!" and the audience tries to make up for its scantiness by yelling, clapping and waving. (The crowd was supposed to have been 100,000-plus.) Nabors assumes the broad accent used on his series. "I shore appreciate it, you bein' here," he begins, "but I think yore crazy." The people eat it up.

He tells them jokes: "The tornado was so bad a hen laid the same egg twice." Accompanied by a five-piece, overcoated combo, he sings "Rockabye Your Baby." He mentions that he will do this Jolson number on his TV special, adding the air date. With Miss Minnesota, he does a wild dance, she in plastic boots and he kicking high his overshoed feet.

Nabors gets the audience to sing along for "When the Saints Go Marching In." Then he presents the trophies for best plowing. Only one winner has stayed. An announcer refers to the star as "Mr. Nabors—Jim Gomer." From a steel drum, Nabors pulls the ticket for the door prize—a steer. Afterward, he remains on the stage for autographing.

Later, at the trailer house that is Plowville headquarters, Linke tries to persuade him not to sign any more autographs. But Nabors feels uncomfortable about the kids waiting in the rain. He goes outside to sign 31 more slips of paper.

He leaves Plowville. For his sponsor, there is one more duty: At the country club in Waseca, he is guest of honor at a reception. He is to meet the leading farmers in the area who sell vegetables to Birds Eye—"or who should," says a plant spokesman. To save time, people are asked not to request autographs; later there will be raffled off "20 personally autographed pictures of Jim Nabors."

The huge room is filled with hundreds of farmers, their wives and children. Nabors does the circuit in an hour by a careful practice of not waiting for people to introduce themselves, but doing the introductions himself. "Hi, how are you?" he asks. "What's your name?" He shakes hands with all. He pats and hugs some of the children. He squats down to exchange lines with the little ones. He is enchanted with the beautiful faces: "They'd melt the heart of the devil!" he exclaims afterward.

Nabors and party are escorted out of Waseca by a station wagon equipped with a red light and siren—the vehicle of the town's auxiliary police.

Returning to Minneapolis in the rain and gathering dark, Nabors sings sotto voce with the radio "If Ever I Would Leave You" and falls to sleep with "April in Paris."

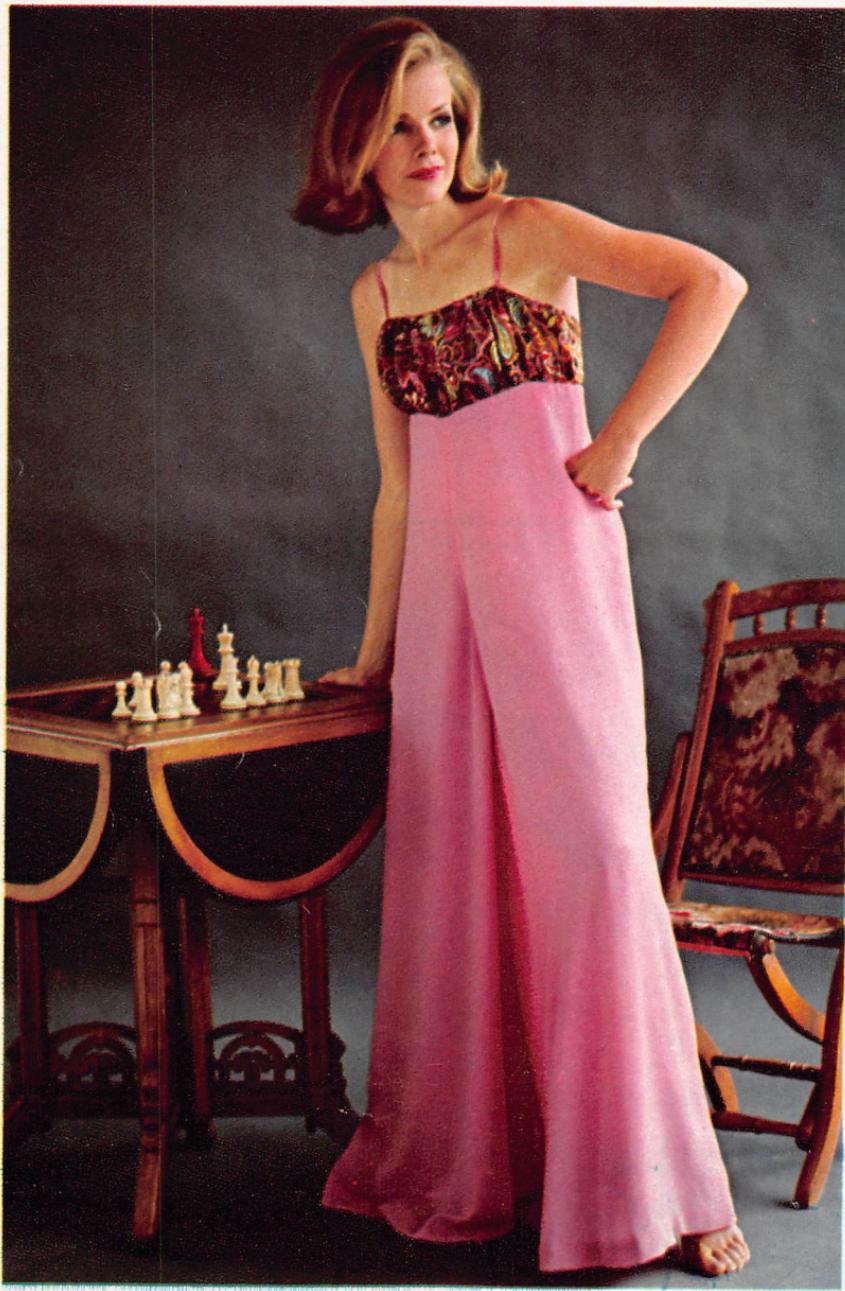

Sunday he flies back to California, and Monday he is making Gomer's fish-eyed, lop-mouthed expressions for the camera. It may have rained, but good Nabors had made "Hey!" in the field of sponsor-happiness.

DOES HE OR DOESN'T HE?

Alan Young ponders the Mister Ed mystery—but the horse isn't talking.

Our Agent, Oat-Oat-Seven, Investigates One Of TV's Most Baffling Mysteries

Memo to: "M"
From: Oat-Oat-Seven

Dear Chief: That "Oat-Oat-Seven" business is the title of a Mister Ed episode where old Ed gets involved in a James Bond-type caper; so, I figured if a talking horse could play detective, I could, too: I decided to try solving one of TV's great mysteries—Who is the Voice of Mister Ed?

Mister Ed began its—or his—fifth season on CBS this fall. In all that time, there has never been one line of screen credit or publicity about whose voice is used.

In my quest of the true voice of Mister Ed, I spoke first to his straight man, Alan Young. I approached the subject casually—I asked Young his real name. He admitted to the real name of Angus Young. Then, still casual, I asked what Mister Ed's real name was. To my surprise, Angus said it was Bamboo Harvester! Laughing, I went on, "So many comedy teams were famous for not getting along off-screen—Martin and Lewis, Abbott and Costello. Do you and Mister Ed speak to each other when you're not working?"

Young actually looked embarrassed. He said, "Ed's stall is just beyond my dressing room. His, er, back is toward me when I come in every morning, but when he hears me coming, he turns his head and looks at me. I say to myself, 'I know he isn't expecting me to speak to him.' But then, just as I get to my dressing room, I say, 'Good morning, Ed.' Besides that, I go out in the San Fernando Valley almost every Saturday morning and ride him."

Next I spoke to Mister Ed's producer-director, Arthur Lubin, who used to direct the Francis the Talking Mule pictures. He told me that the name Mister Ed came from a series of magazine stories about a horse which not only talked but drank. Now there was never any secrecy about the voice of Francis the Mule—it was Chill Wills. But when I asked Mr. Lubin who spoke for Mister Ed, he would only answer evasively, "It's an actor who doesn't want his name used."

I was discouraged—but I also had my first solid lead! If I could find an actor around the Mister Ed stage who was not a member of the cast, he had to be my man. I scouted the studio parking lot, where all the spaces are marked with the performers' names. Only one didn't match up—Allan "Rocky" Lane, whom I remembered as an old cowboy actor!

I tried to get on the Mister Ed stage to see the talking horse working and to see whether Allan "Rocky" Lane was near-by. (Would Lane talk without moving his lips?) Alan Young and Arthur Lubin and everyone else were very polite and cooperative, but it just happened that every time I was around, Mister Ed—and Mr. Lane—weren't. If everybody hadn't been so darned nice to me, I might have thought they were purposely arranging it so that I couldn't see Mister Ed talk.

However, in the library I found an item in a 1962 issue of "Films in Review" which said, "Allan 'Rocky' Lane . . . at the moment is the voice of the talking horse in Mister Ed."

So I ran a make on Lane:

Real name: Harry Albershart. Born: Mishawaka, Ind. . . . Educated: Notre Dame . . . Left college to join a Cincinnati pro football team . . . Became actor with stock company in Cincinnati . . . Joined road company of musical comedy "Hit the Deck" . . . Appeared on Broadway in "Zero Hour" with Alice Brady . . . Made first movie in 1929: "Not Quite Decent," with June Collyer . . . Got himself a toupee and began making Westerns in 1938.

That seemed to be my man. It looked as if I had solved the mystery which has been baffling television for five years! But wasn't it all just a little bit too pat? If Allan "Rocky" Lane's name appeared in print several years ago as the voice of Mister Ed, why were Lubin and the rest still saying it was a secret? Then I recalled what Lubin had said—"an actor who doesn't want his name used." I suddenly realized that this was a ridiculous statement. There never was an actor who didn't want his name used!

What, then, was the secret that Arthur Lubin and those around Mister Ed were trying to hide? Suddenly I knew the truth—Mister Ed actually does talk! The voice is his!

And why are they all so secretive about this gifted animal? My answer can only be theory—but no one remembers the name of the horse that Allan "Rocky" Lane rode in his many Western movies—and I believe it was Mister Ed! Lane must be the only movie cowboy who talked to his horse and the horse talked back!

But why is everyone so anxious to keep it a secret that Mister Ed really talks? At first, I couldn't figure this out, and then I recalled what Arthur Lubin had told me about the original Mister Ed of the magazine stories. He not only talked but he drank!

Perhaps, ironically, the television Mister Ed has this same human failing that his magazine precursor had. Thus, if it got out that he really talked, people would immediately want to know whether he also drank. They might even ask him whether he drank, and if the truth became public knowledge, it would be very bad—Mister Ed being such a popular show with the kiddies and all.

So, there's the whole story, in print for the first time. I don't know about you, "M," but I feel better about it now than I did before. In the make-believe world of television, where Lassie is really a boy and Flipper is really a girl, it is refreshing to know that Ed does his own talking. Personally, I don't care whether he drinks or not.

This weekly TV show boasts an audience of only three, but its sponsors are more interested in touchdowns than ratings

UCLA coach Tommy Prothro was reluctant to talk about it. "I don't know that we want publicity on a gimmick," he drawled. And he was equally shy about allowing photographs of his by now not-so-secret weapon, preferring to give all the credit to "those 11 boys on the field."

Prothro's Rose Bowl-bound team has enjoyed a highly successful season, and despite his reluctance, at least some of the credit must be given to that "gimmick"—closed-circuit television and a video-tape recorder—and to his assistant coaches who use it so adroitly. Above, from left, coaches Franklyn Rodgers, Ron Siegrist and Bobb Mc-

Kittrick work with the equipment as UCLA trounces California, 56 to 3. Note the TV monitors in front of the coaches and atop the camera.

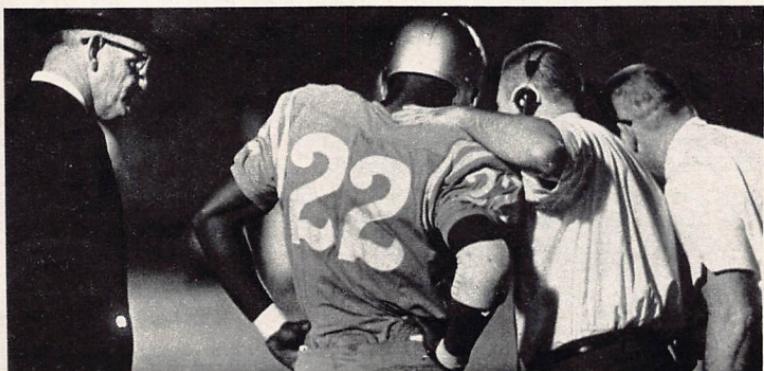

At a later game, which UCLA won again, 28 to Washington's 24, Siegrist gave a demonstration. At half-time he had the cameraman rerun the first two periods of play on his monitor, called for a repeat of some plays and took notes on offensive and defensive patterns.

"We're trying to record every defense they've run," Siegrist said. "If they've got an unusual trick, I tell the coaches on the field. You can find the mistakes a team makes during the game. And if the opposing team runs a new play, we look to see how they block for it."

Going over a play in which Washington almost blocked a UCLA punt, Siegrist said: "I picked up a breakdown in our punt protection." UCLA's punt protection thereafter improved.

But the television system does have its limitations. Coach Rodgers conceded that it was fine for making adjustments during a game, "but it doesn't help us teach players to block and tackle. And it'll never replace the half-time pep talk."

As for the players, there's a definite feeling that Big Brother is watching. Co-captain Jim Colletto explained: "You know those coaches know who's making the mistakes, who blew that one."

The prime-time-serial craze seems to be cooling with the ratings decline of Peyton Place. CBS has canceled a pair which it had in prospect for next season: Sunset Boulevard and East of Eden . . . SEN. EVERETT DIRKSEN will be the guest on Issues and Answers on Jan. 9.

ABC has bought a trio of SAMUEL GOLDWYN feature films: "Porgy and Bess," "Guys and Dolls" and "Hans Christian Andersen" . . . The Twentieth Century has finished a show on DR. PAT SMITH, an American who runs a hospital for 700 mountain tribesmen in the Vietnam highlands . . . LENA HORNE will sing on PERRY COMO's show of Jan. 24.

On Jan. 23, Meet the Press does an hour show via Telstar between the U.S. and two European countries . . . CBS pilot project for next season: a PHIL SILVERS starrer called The Help, written and produced by SHERWOOD SCHWARTZ of Gilligan's Island . . . What ever happened to PINKY LEE? Well, he'll star on Broadway next April in a musical based on the autobiography of the late comic JIMMY SAVO . . . ROBERT GOULET's spy series for ABC (debut: Jan. 12) has a new title: Code: Blue Light.

FRANK DE FELITTA ("The Stately Ghosts of England") has produced another for NBC for Jan. 9--"The World of the Teen-Ager," most of which was shot in Lexington, Mass. . . . Alumni Fun returns to CBS on Sunday afternoons for a limited engagement: Jan. 23 to May 1.

DICK CLARK has sold CBS a Saturday morning kiddy show which starts next month. It's called A-Go-Ghouls and features four puppets: Clyde, Clod, Clutz and Clunk . . . SUSAN STRASBERG will appear with her recent bridegroom, CHRIS JONES, in an episode of The Legend of Jesse James called "Reunion."

TEN YEARS AGO THIS WEEK: Omnibus starred EARTHA KITT in the title role of OSCAR WILDE's "Salome." LEO GENN played Herod and PATRICIA NEAL was Herodias . . . Another of OSCAR WILDE's works, "The Selfish Giant," was presented on Star Tonight . . . BUSTER KEATON, ZASU PITTS and JOE E. BROWN starred in "The Silent Partner" on Directors' Playhouse . . . BARRY FITZGERALD and BOBBY CLARK were in "Santa Claus and the 10th Avenue Kid" on Alfred Hitchcock Presents . . . CBS was lining up LAUREN BACALL, CLAUDETTE COLBERT, NOEL COWARD and MILDRED NATWICK for "Blithe Spirit."

Notes on newborns

It's amazing how many things a newborn can do. During the first week he can lift his chin, yawn, sneeze and hiccup. By the end of the first month little ears are alert to sounds, little eyes can follow light. When offered a finger, a dainty hand will grasp with a vise-like grip. While all these antics are reflex actions, they're forerunners to voluntary actions. As his nervous system develops, your baby will begin to do things with intent.

Good starting point. Rice cereal is often recommended as the starting cereal because it's a single-grain cereal and well-tolerated by babies. Gerber Rice Cereal is especially desirable because it's mild and has a special nutritional extra. It's the only baby rice cereal which contains rice polishings...a natural source of B-complex vitamins. Like all Gerber Cereals, it is also enriched with iron, calcium and additional B-vitamins.

Wall saver. You can spare the nursery wall from baby-bath splashes by placing a panel of gay, plastic-coated wallpaper behind baby's bath table. And baby will enjoy looking at a colorful print.

Baby saver. Easy way to prevent stinging eyes at shampoo time: rub a bit of cold cream above baby's eyebrows. Side-tracks suds; keeps them from trickling into sparkling eyes.

Growth progress depends on an adequate amount of protein. Nine Gerber Strained Meats provide satisfying ways to give your baby growth-promoting protein. Made from special cuts carefully selected by Armour, they're processed ARMOUR to extra-smooth, nicely moist perfection. High in savory flavor, they're relished by babies with lip-smacking zest.
